This Saturday swingshift started off busy, and even through it was raining, the calls didn't slow down. Officers responded to a trespasser, who when contacted by the officer, decided to walk away. He was told he was going to be arrested, and that made him runaway. After a foot pursuit of a couple of blocks, he was arrested and taken to jail. Officers then made an arrest on a female for several outstanding felony warrants. The officer had knowledge that the female was wanted (one of the warrants was from his investigation), and he was able to locate her. She was taken to jail as well. Later in the shift officers investigated a possible extortion. It revolved around a subject sending nude photos of himself to an unknown person on social media. After sending the photos, the victim was contacted by the person receiving them, who said they were going to email them to his social media contacts if he did not pay money. The victim did pay, but the threats kept coming.
